

CANT VS. MORALITY.

The famous "Beecher trial" was a deplorable affair in many respects, says Puck, but it served one good end. It opened the door of one of the most offensive whited sepulchres ever known, and let a great volume of noxious gas escape and lose itself in the fresh air. It showed what a community may come to when it lets cant and lip-service take the place of plain common, every day morality; and it showed forth a set of people who were practicing all sorts of cheap immoralities under the cloak of religious sentiment.

These were people who started out decently enough; but who had created themselves into taking religious talk for religion; who, having nothing solid to tie up to, had drifted into a sloppy and highly immoral sentimentality.

The worst part of the Beecher trial however, was the way the church tried to clear its pastor.

The members of Beecher's church would not listen to evidence and hounded every man and woman who dared to testify to any fact proving Beecher's guilt.

This is the way with all churches. It is a mistake to think that any point can be gained by hushing up the wrong doings of a pastor.

When his good name is assailed, he should demand and immediate investigation, or his church should, and the facts should be known at once and the sooner the better.

Churches have gone to such wretched straight to "vindicate" pastors, that a vindication of a pastor after his good name has been sullied, amounts to little or nothing.

Representatives of the Republican party never more conspicuously showed that they possessed the courage of their convictions than did those of Ohio on Wednesday, when they nominated by acclamation the author of the McKinley bill. To do it may or may not have been good politics—that is as it may appear in November—but that it was an act of high courage no one can doubt, in view of the war that has been made upon the measure by its opponents, some of whom have been and are of the Republican fold, and in view, too, of the assertion, so often and always confidently made by its opponents, and half admitted by some of its supporters, that the great Democratic victories of 1890 were largely or chiefly due to it.

It now looks as if the Chilean insurgents are doomed to defeat. This will be regretted by all who are in sympathy with patriots battling for liberty.—Sac. News.

The saddest thing in connection with the affair is the attitude of the United States Government. We should have given the patriots a helping hand—the same sort of a hand that France extended to us in the dark hours of the revolution. To every nation struggling for freedom in the New World the United States owes its help. But it never helps; in fact, its policy has been the reverse. Had it not meddled with the Itata Chili might have been free.

The story that Prentice Mulford considered himself possessed of the spirit of Neapolian Bonapart is probably founded in the fertile brain of some newspaper writer.

Mulford was an eccentric genius, but proofs that he was insane are decidedly lacking.

Corbett and Sullivan sparred in the boxing scene in "Willing Hearts and Helping Hands" in San Francisco Wednesday night. People who paid $2 and $3 for seats say it was the tamest thing they ever beheld, and every body was disgusted with the exhibition.
